Working in collaboration with DANDANS, a Tokyo based artist collective, Transformer is honored to present 2:46 and thereafter, an exhibition highlighting emerging Japanese artists' responses to the March 2011 earthquake and tsunami that struck Japan's north-east coast, and its affect on the country and the Japanese people. The title of the exhibition, 2:46 and thereafter, marks the time the earthquake hit, referenced throughout Japan in the same vein Americans now reference the date 9/11.

This comprehensive exhibition, the first of its kind in the US, will feature works in a variety of mediums exploring emerging Japanese artists' creative responses to the terrible catastrophe that killed thousands of people, and how life has changed in its aftermath. Through installation, painting, video, sculpture, photography, and drawing, the eighteen artists featured in 2:46 and thereafter – Takeshi Abe, Chiho Akama, Yasushi Ebihara, Yuya Fujita, Masaharu Futoyu, Kotaro Isobe, Mami Kosemura, Shinji Maeda, Kazumasa Noguchi, Mitsuki Noguchi, Tetsuya Noguchi, Mihoko Ogaki, Akiko Ozasa, Masaharu Sato, Shinichi Tsuchiya, Takayoshi Tsuchiya, Ryota Unno and Keiki Yamada – address issues that many of the people of Japan, primarily the young people, are exploring as they adjust to life following destruction, loss, and still to be determined affects from Japan's most powerful earthquake since records began.

The collaboration between DANDANS and Transformer in developing & presenting 2:46 and thereafter is a conduit for cultural exchange and better understanding of our shared humanity through emerging contemporary artistic expression. The artist members of DANDANS have created new works that will be exhibited for the first time through this exhibition. The collaboration between these two artist-centered organizations marks an important and timely show of support for the people of Japan, especially the young artists, within the capital of the US. 2:46 and thereafter is presented in tandem with the launch of the 100th anniversary of the National Cherry Blossom Festival, with closing weekend activities included in the Festival's official line up of events.

Many thanks to the Japanese Embassy in Washington, DC and the American Embassy in Japan for their support, and to Pepco's Edison Place Gallery for hosting the exhibition.
